Cyber Center of Excellence Change of Command

Maj. Gen. Paul Stanton will relinquish command to Maj. Gen. Ryan Janovic

In a time-honored Army tradition, Maj. Gen. Paul Stanton will relinquish command of the Cyber Center of Excellence to incoming Commanding General Maj. Gen. Ryan Janovic on Aug. 2, 2024, at 9 a.m. at Barton Field on Fort Eisenhower with a formation representing every unit on post.

Maj. Gen. Stanton assumed command in a ceremony June 30, 2021, and during the past three years he has overseen the Fort's renaming to Eisenhower, the $4.2 billion installation modernization program including the $1.2 billion cyber campus transformation and $5 million in renovating 118 military family homes. He also broke ground on 75 new family homes and assisted in the integration of early Cyber childhood education in Columbia County.

Maj. Gen. Stanton has been nominated for lieutenant general and to serve as Director of the Defense Information Systems Agency, and commander of the Joint Force Headquarters-Department of Defense Information Network at Fort Meade, Md.

Incoming Commanding General Maj. Gen. Ryan Janovic, a native of Akron, Ohio, graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point in 1993 and commissioned into the Military Intelligence Corps. During his 31-year Army career, he served in Iraq and Afghanistan, was a White House Fellow, and a distinguished graduate of the National War College. In 2019, Ryan joined the Cyber Corps as the Deputy Commander of Joint Force Headquarters – Cyber (Army). This experience, combined with three decades of work in the intelligence corps, led to the opportunity to serve as the Director of Operations (J3) for U.S. Cyber Command at Fort Meade, Md.

Media are invited to attend and capture the ceremony and must RSVP to lesli.j.ellis-wouters.civ@army.mil by 3 p.m., Wednesday, July 31. Media attending will meet at Gate 6 Visitor Center Parking Lot at 7:45 a.m. Aug. 2, for escort to the ceremony. Due to the ceremony schedule, there will not be an opportunity for interviews of the incoming or outgoing Commanding Generals. Future opportunities to interview Maj. Gen. Janovic will be scheduled.
