HISTORY OF FORT EISENHOWER

- Camp Gordon held its groundbreaking ceremony on 18 October 1941.
- During WWII, the 56,000-acre training site was home to three divisions: the 4th Infantry Division, the 26th Infantry Division, and the 10th Armored Division and served as a Prisoner of War camp.
- On 1 October 1948 the Signal Corps Training Center (SCTC) was activated, it would become the primary producer of Army communications specialists.
- On 21 March 1956 Camp Gordon was redesignated as Fort Gordon.
- Following Vietnam was a period of reorganization which resulted in the consolidation of all signal training at the newly established US Army Signal Center on Fort Gordon.
- In June 1986 the US Army Signal Corp Regiment was established and Fort Gordon was designated the regimental home base.
- During Operations Desert Shield/Desert Storm in the 1990s, the Signal Center prepared soldiers for deployment and became the training grounds for all satellite operators and maintainers within DOD.
- In 2013 Army leadership directed that ARCYBER relocate to Fort Gordon to consolidate and streamline Army cyberspace and affiliated functions.
- In March 2014, the Signal Center of Excellence transitions to the United States Army Cyber Center of Excellence.
- Still the "Home of the Signal Regiment," the newly named Fort Eisenhower is a power projection platform for the Army. Hosting all services of the Armed Forces, it is the nation's premier center for training and operations of the complex communications that empower our military.
